

DAMODARAM SANJIVAYYA NATIONAL LAW UNIVERSITY

“WE THE PEPOLE”: DSNLU Journal of Social Sciences

Title of journal: We the people-DSNLU Journal of social sciences

The journal is published twice yearly in January and July.

The journal is interdisciplinary. The scope of the journal covers the disciplines of social sciences and humanities including sociology, history, political science, economics, Anthropology, psychology, literature, law and allied subjects.

One finds no hard and fast boundaries between social sciences and scientific approaches to understanding of the law. Since law itself is interdisciplinary by its very nature, all sciences, social sciences and humanities are related to it in some way or other. At times they stand at different points on a continuum of analysis and are differentiated more on the basis of different questions they pose and the orientations of the subject. The social sciences, humanities, literature and allied disciplines help to promote comprehensive understanding of this field of study.

The journal aims at the following objectives

1. Since the National law schools are intended to offer integrated program of legal education which includes the components of social sciences such as History, Economics, political Science and Sociology. The journal would fulfil the academic requirements social sciences and legal education.
2. The social sciences would contribute a great deal for providing the necessary background and knowledge for advancement of legal education
3. Social sciences would provide the basis for the development of legal education.
