About the Law Review

Shimla Law Review is envisioned to be an annual publication, owned and published by HPNLU, Shimla. The Review is intended to provide a forum for faculty members, research scholars, judges, and students. It is not confined to the discipline of law but allows the contributors to take a call on the age-old tradition of legal scholarship. It is open to tread beyond the established modes of reflection or exposition on select central ideas, concepts, tools, and techniques that are evidently integral to or associated with the legal academic discourse. SLR believes that the task of legal education institutions is not limited to devising some expedient ideational mechanism to deal with diverse legal issues. It goes beyond and includes deliberations that can affect the society in multifarious ways and supports the progressive values that are imbibed in the Constitution. In essence the work of scholarship involves criticizing, revising the existing quantum of information, concepts, values, methods and throwing light new darkness of unknown. The topography, where the University is located, resembles the terrains of law and provides the most conducive opportunity for a publication such as SLR that dwells deeper into the realms and nuances of these terrains of law and legal system.
