CONFERENCE THEMES

Indian economy has been expanding rapidly and being considered as fastest growing economy in the world. A noticeable structural transformation has been observed over the last seven decades. The share of primary sector in GDP has declined sharply from 58.8 percent in 1950-51 to 18.6 percent in 2020-21. On the other hand, service sector registered a rapid increase from 27.8 percent to 53.6 percent and the secondary sector share of GDP increased from 13.2 percent to 27.8 percent during the same period. Landlocked and marine resources exploitation will occur, given technological advancement, to increase Indian economic pie. Hence, there is a need for sustainable development by mobilization, allocation and management of resources within the criteria of efficiency, distributive justice and other justice considerations to meet the needs, wants and challenges of 1.4 billion population.

The Government of India aims at $7 trillion economy by 2030. It has initiated several programs like Make in India, Skill India, Start-ups, Good Governance to double the economy within a span of seven years. In addition, as a signatory to international conventions and conferences regarding promotion of international trade, sustainable development and peace it incorporates the provisions in the Constitution. It necessitates academic-industry-State interactions to design efficient incentive structure to change the behavior of stakeholders to achieve the sustainable development that in turn promote value of life. The conference provides a platform for the academicians, industrialists, professionals, practitioners and policy makers to disseminate the knowledge, interaction with the resource persons and develop a network in the interdisciplinary areas of law and economics.

The previous conferences largely have been focused on private and business law. Moreover, our nation's economic growth and development also necessitates public law. Hence, the 9th International Conference on Law and Economics (ICLE, 2023) at the Babasaheb Bhimrao Ambedkar University, Lucknow, will be focused on Constitution of India. The functionalities of the Constitution of India especially separation of powers and rights, and obligations of citizens which promote national, environmental, data, food, financial security and peace for enhancement of overall value of life. The conference also encourages academic contribution in the areas of private and business law. The broad themes of the conference will be based on the Journal of Economic Literature classification mentioned in code 'K': Law and Economics. Please browse the web link for further information and themes of the conference: <https://www.aeaweb.org/jel/guide/jel.php>

Research Papers are invited for the ICLE, 2023 on the themes of Law and Economics. It will provide an opportunity to discuss interdisciplinary research that will promote scholarship on Constitution of India and the Rest of the World, and also in the areas of private and business laws.
