The school has recognition from the Bar Council of India & the University Grants Commission.

About School of Social Sciences & Liberal Arts

Our School of Social Sciences and Liberal Arts is a thriving hub of intellectual exploration where students embark on a transformative educational journey. Here, we take immense pride in fostering an atmosphere that celebrates the fusion of ideas across diverse disciplines. Our commitment to interdisciplinarity is at the core of our educational philosophy, and it is reflected in our comprehensive array of majors, which include Journalism, Psychology, Design, Political Science, Sociology, History, International Relations and many more.

About GNLU Centre for Law & Technology

The Gujarat National Law University after offering the B.Sc. LL.B. (Hons.) programme since 2004 established the GNLU Centre for Law and Technology (GCLT), which strives to keep its stakeholders abreast with the developments in either of the fields and ensure providing a platform for the creation of the academic blend of science and law by holding various activities amongst its stakeholders at regional, national and international levels.

About The Conference

The development and growth of Artificial Intelligence (AI) has not been a matter of overnight success for scientists. The journey of AI, which initially began as the imaginative realm of science fiction writers, has now evolved into a tangible reality and become an indispensable part of our lives. This transformative technology has influenced and reshaped numerous industries, with its impact ranging from subtle to profound. Notably, AI has found its way into various aspects of our daily lives, and it is worth considering a few examples to appreciate its significance. Google search predictions, voice recognition, email filtering, weather forecast, Amazon's Alexa, and Apple's Siri are a few examples of AI.

Emerging technologies, notably Artificial Intelligence (AI), are catalyzing a profound transformation within legal frameworks and reshaping the traditional constructs of legal knowledge. The capacity of machines to emulate human reasoning and exhibit autonomous cognitive processes has ushered AI into the teaching-learning knowledge sharing and the legal domain, heralding the advent of unprecedented possibilities.

The integration of AI into various sectors, encompassing the realms of academia, teaching, social sciences, justice delivery, law enforcement, intellectual property, commercial endeavors, and a lot of other domains that are pivotal to societal functioning, introduces a complex web of considerations surrounding human rights, obligations, and legal discourse. This influx of AI has precipitated an intricate dialogue, centered on deciphering its definitive role within scholarly inquiry, all the while endeavoring to attain conceptual clarity within this paradigm-shifting technological landscape.

Remarkably, the realm of jurisprudence lacks an authoritative body of work that adequately accommodates AI as an equal and influential factor within the intricate tapestry of rights, duties, and the dispensation of justice. Human Rights discourse is now compelled to grapple with this unprecedented scenario. In this dynamic context, judicial precedents have already begun to surface, affording insight into AI's position vis-à-vis human rights.

Noteworthy developments, such as those observed in South Africa and Australia, which recognize AI as a creator and grant it certain intellectual property rights, mark a critical juncture in this evolving landscape. Simultaneously, AI is increasingly examined as an entity that can potentially infringe upon human rights, encompassing issues ranging from privacy concerns and surveillance to instances of racial bias and broader dimensions of discrimination.

Complex nuances emerge when evaluating the interplay between human rights, state interests, democratic principles, individual freedoms, and the digital age. Equally imperative are the roles and responsibilities of non-state actors, especially technology companies, in shaping AI's design and applications.

These multifaceted considerations extend to the spheres of policy formulation, the establishment of normative frameworks, the evolution of judicial doctrines, and notably, the scholarly interpretations and critiques that further inform the ongoing discourse. The convergence of AI and Human Rights, within this context offers a fertile ground for profound intellectual exploration and contemplation.

In light of this evolving landscape, the IILM Law School, in collaboration with the School of Social Sciences and Liberal Arts at IILM University, is pleased to extend an invitation for the submission of research abstracts to our forthcoming international conference on the contemporary realm of "Artificial Intelligence & Human Rights." This inaugural conference is conceived with the overarching goal of delving deep into the intricate juncture of AI and human rights within the expansive framework of rights, responsibilities, and ethical obligations.

Objectives

The objectives of the "International Conference on Artificial Intelligence and Human Rights" are designed to facilitate an enriching and informative experience for all participants, bridging the gap between industry and academia and promoting awareness and efficacy. This conference aims to empower attendees in the following ways:

- Foster Insight and Knowledge
- Explore AI Applications
- Chart the AI Landscape
- Critically Examine Limitations of AI

By addressing these objectives, the conference endeavors to equip its participants with valuable insights and knowledge, further bridging the gaps between various domains and promoting informed, strategic engagement with the evolving landscape of Artificial Intelligence in the context of humanities and the legal sphere.

Themes

The themes for submissions in the conference are diverse and encompass a wide spectrum of crucial topics at the intersection of AI and Human Rights. These themes provide a framework for discussion and exploration, including but not limited to:

- Human Rights Interpretations and AI: Delve into the evolving interpretations of human rights in the context of Artificial Intelligence, exploring the ethical and legal dimensions.
- AI and Challenges for International Human Rights: Examine the challenges and opportunities AI presents to the international human rights framework, including implications for global legal and ethical standards.
- Application of Common Law Principles on AI: Investigate how established common law principles apply to the realm of Artificial Intelligence, shaping legal reasoning and outcomes.
- AI, Constitutionalism, and Democracy: Analyze the role of AI in relation to constitutional principles and the maintenance of the rule of law, considering its impact on governance and legal systems.
- Role of AI in Access to Justice and Justice Delivery: Explore how AI can enhance or hinder access to justice and the efficiency of justice delivery systems.
- Liability and Ownership Rights in Relation to AI: Discuss the intricate issues surrounding liability and ownership rights concerning AI technologies, especially in cases of intellectual property and innovation.
- Public Policy Development and Legal/Regulatory Response to AI: Evaluate the formulation of policies and legal or regulatory responses to the proliferation of AI, considering the implications for society and human rights.
- AI, Geopolitics, and Digital Sovereignty: Investigate the geopolitical dynamics of AI and its implications for digital sovereignty, national interests, and global cooperation.
- AI and Democracy: Scrutinize the influence of AI on democratic processes and institutions, including its role in elections, governance, and citizen participation.
- AI in the Context of Bias, Injustice, and Discrimination: Address the challenges and opportunities AI presents in combating or perpetuating bias, injustice, and discrimination in various contexts.
- AI, Surveillance, Censorship, and Free Speech: Examine the intricate relationship between AI, surveillance, censorship, and the protection of free speech and privacy.

- Interaction of State and Individual Interest in AI: Analyze the complex interplay between state interests and individual rights in the context of AI, considering issues of privacy, security, and autonomy.
- Tech Corporations: Responsibilities and Liabilities: Explore the roles and responsibilities of technology corporations in the development and deployment of AI, and consider their legal liabilities in this evolving landscape.

These themes provide a comprehensive framework for engaging with the multifaceted challenges and opportunities presented by the intersection of Artificial Intelligence and human rights, encouraging in-depth discussion and analysis from diverse perspectives.
