

CALL FOR PAPERS

NLIU-
INTERNATIONAL TRADE LAW
JOURNAL
VOLUME III

DEADLINE FOR SUBMISSION:

31st DEC 2023

ABOUT THE JOURNAL

The NLIU International Trade Law Journal, published annually by the National Law Institute University, Bhopal, is a platform designed to encourage interdisciplinary discussions on International Trade Law. It seeks innovative perspectives from students, practitioners, academicians, and jurists, making it a hub for groundbreaking insights.

Following a rigorous double-blinded peer-review process, the journal ensures the highest quality in its publications. We are fortunate to have a distinguished board of advisors, comprising renowned experts in the field of trade and related laws. Our peer reviewers, who possess a profound understanding of International Trade Law and its related legal fields, come from both academic and practitioner backgrounds.

Established in 2021, the journal's mission is to facilitate intellectual discourse and academic research in the diverse realm of international trade law. The journal's team is committed to advancing the understanding of International Trade Law and its role in the global economy and associated fields by promoting legal scholarship on a wide range of topics.

This platform serves as an avenue for students, scholars, and academicians worldwide to share their insights on international trade. To maintain publication efficiency and quality, the journal strictly adheres to a double-blinded peer-review process. As of now, it has successfully published two volumes.

The journal's ambition is to publish articles authored by legal experts that address contemporary and interdisciplinary legal issues, enriching the discourse in the field.

CALL FOR PAPERS

We invite submissions for our third volume from academicians, practitioners, research scholars, students, and experts from within the legal community for manuscripts that assert and defend a well-reasoned position relating to international economic laws.

Authors willing to contribute to the journal are required to submit full papers by 11:59 P.M. (Indian Standard Time), December 31, 2023. All manuscripts will undergo a rigorous process of review and only those manuscripts of the highest academic standards shall be accepted.

SUBMISSION CATEGORIES

LONG ARTICLES (6000-8000 words)

In this category of submissions, the journal expects a detailed analysis of the issue(s) undertaken by the author, to the extent of a detailed analysis of the surrounding legal scenario at domestic and international levels and/or cross-jurisdictional analysis, and concrete conclusions and suggestions (through a reform oriented research methodology), indicating a specific way forward.

CASE COMMENTS & LEGISLATIVE NOTES (1500-2500 words)

The journal seeks in-depth analysis of recent judgments or legislative developments related to International Trade Law. The piece is expected to go beyond mere case or legislative summaries. Authors are expected to critically assess the judgment or legislative pronouncements, considering relevant laws and stakeholders.

SHORT ARTICLES (4000-6000 words)

In this category of submissions, the journal expects analysis of contemporary legal issues from single or multiple legal perspectives, i.e. a detailed examination of legal developments and/or happenings (which may involve legislative enactments, jurisprudential developments by judicial developments) using single or multiple legal perspectives as (a) basis. In this category, if at all an author attempts to analyse debatable issues, i.e. issues that could be addressed through two perspectives of being justified or not justified, authors are encouraged to employ multilateral perspectives for the purposes of analysis, and then provide a conclusion in furtherance of such analysis.
