OPEN CALL FOR ABSTRACT 2024

In an ever-increasing globalized world where economies are integrating, it is not out of context to observe an exponential rise in the number of Bilateral Investment Treaties (BITs) signed amongst various nations. BITs are essential international agreements signed between two or more countries to offer protection to the investment made by an investor through articulating substantive rules governing the host state's treatment of the investment and providing a dispute settlement mechanism applicable to the alleged violation of such rules. To that end, international investment law is a regime which aids in understanding various nuances or gradation pertaining to the negotiation and implementation of BITs which would not be completed unless awards made by arbitral tribunals are not thoroughly perused. Now, as opposed to much of the discussion under the head of international economic law focusing on the World Trade Organization, the International Investment Law has gained a lot of traction due to its efficacy in resolving disputes and thereby constantly contributing to jurisprudence.

OPEN CALL FOR ABSTRACT 2024

Albeit that, the journey has not been hunky-dory as BITs have grappled with numerous challenges, resulting in growing scepticism amongst various stakeholders. Given that international investment law is a fragment of international law, its interface with multilateral environmental agreements or international human rights law is also under the lens. This has led to various nations redrafting their BITs by ditching the conventional standards and evolving some new norms and principles to govern the same. Only through research and proper deliberation, the contours of contemporary norms and principles could be appreciated and reinvigorated with legitimacy under the international investment law regime.

Based on this discussion, scholars and practitioners at all stages of their careers are invited to contribute to Issue VI of the RGNUL Book Series on Corporate Laws and Corporate Affairs (“RBS”), 2023-24 a wing of the Centre for Business Laws and Taxation (CBLT), Rajiv Gandhi National University of Law, Punjab. This year’s focus will be on “The Future of Bilateral Investment Treaties: A Comprehensive Analysis” and in this regard, abstracts focusing on the underlying theme are welcome.
